

This excerpt from the book Invest With As Little As $100: A guide to investing in financial instrument provides detailed look into how much it costs a person to make an investment in both corporate and government bonds. It contains simple, easy to understand examples of how much an investor will have to spend to either buy or sell a bond based on whether the security has been newly issued or purchased from someone after it has been in existence for the number of years. After reading this section, a person should be able to easily calculate how much they will have to spend when buying a bond or expect to receive when selling one.
