

Excerpt from From the Worlds Devotional Classics, Vol. 4 of 10: Theologica Germanica to Leighton But one might say, Now since the Perfect can not be known nor apprehended of any creature but the soul is a creature, how can it be known by the soul Answer: This is why we say, by the soul as a creature. We mean it is impossible to the creature in virtue of its creature-nature and qualities, that by which it saith I and myse For in whatsoever creature the Perfect shall be known, therein creature-nature, qualities, the I, the self and the like, must all be lost and done away. This is the meaning of that saying of St. Paul: When that which is perfect is come (that is, when it is known), then that which is in part (to wit, creature nature, qualities, the I, the self, the mine) will be despised and counted for naught. So long as we think much of these things, cleave to them with love, joy, pleasure or desire, so long remaineth the Perfect unknown to us.
