

Sara Wade has inherited Harrogate, her paternal grandmother's Louisiana plantation. Though it's unheard of for a single woman to live alone in 1850, her mother, who is embarrassed by her daughter's ability to see ghosts, encourages Sara to go so she doesn't have to explain Sara's affliction to her friends. Sara, who is more than fed up with being offered up on the matrimonial market to less than desirable prospective husbands, couldn't be happier. Not until she arrives at Harrogate does she realize that the house holds more than her freedom. It also holds her destiny with the ghost who loved her in another lifetime and is determined to win her back. But all is not peaceful at Harrogate. Another ghost resides there who is just as determined to keep them apart, even if it means killing Sara. Destiny awaits in the Garden of the Moon. Cover design by Kellie Sharpe.
