

One after another Ralph's friends are being ripped apart. At first, he refused to believe a werewolf could be responsible. To the police, the idea is absurd, but Ralph's friends weren't easy targets. They fought back. They inflicted what should have been fatal wounds on their attacker. Still, they died, and the murderer remained at large. His other friends want to make silver bullets and go after the killer on their own. Ralph doesn't like the idea, but his friends are being slaughtered. With or without the help of the police, the death has to stop, and he'll do whatever he needs to in order to stop the killer.
