Will helping him be the death of her? Im not supposed to be hampered by emotion. Its a pain in the ass to have feelings. Rider If youre so intent on killing me, wouldnt it have made more sense to leave me IN the building when it exploded? Kristen ~~~ Excerpt: ~~~ He was still out there, frightened, hurting, furious. His anger and pain flowed like a red watercolor wash over Kristens dreams. Giving up on sleep, she dragged out of bed and wrapped a wool robe around her. There was no escaping him. Shed tried. Music, wine, even the sleeping pills left over from Skippers death, and still his pain and fury reached her. At first, shed thought the insidious feelings were a return of the sympathetic aftershocks that had rocked her after Skipper died. But those echoes had long since faded. So when the fear and pain had reverberated inside her two days ago, shed been plunged back in time to the harrowing weeks after her twin brothers funeral. Back to nights of black panic when she would jerk awake out of a sound sleep, senses alert, only to remember for the twentieth, or fiftieth, or hundredth time, that it couldnt be Skipper. Skipper was dead. Finally the ghostly sensations had faded, like the phantom pain of an amputated limb, and Kristen had been left with an aching void where her twin brotherâ€™her other selfâ€™had been. Shed always lived with him inside her, linked to him in a way other people could never understand. When hed died, a part of her self had been ripped away. It had taken her a year to get over the worst of it, a year before Skippers song had completely faded. Sometimes now, the silence left by his death overwhelmed her. Oh, she gleaned things from others around her, but they were just feelings, a weak manifestation of the empathy sheâ€™d shared with her brother. Theyâ€™d always been there, as much a part of her as the sound of the wind. Shed learned a long time ago to detach herself from them. Shed been doing really well too, until two days ago, when he had showed up in her mind. Tonight was the worst so far. She pushed her hair away from her damp forehead, wishing she could push him away as easily.
